

Aga Khan Award for Architecture

Djibouti Project on 2019 Shortlist for Aga Khan Award for Architecture

Master Jury to decide share of US$ 1 million prize

Tadjourah, Djibouti, 25 April 2019 – The Tadjourah SOS Children’s Village, a design based on a traditional medina, has been shortlisted for the 2019 Aga Khan Award for Architecture. The announcement was made by Farrokh Derakhshani, Director of the Award, in a ceremony in Kazan, Russia, today.

For information about the other 19 projects on the shortlist, please see www.akdn.org/architecture and the full on-line press kit, which includes briefs on each project and high-resolution images: www.akdn.org/2019ArchitectureAward.

The Aga Khan Award for Architecture is one of the oldest major awards in the field of architecture. It selects projects – from slum upgrading to high-rise “green” buildings – that not only exhibit architectural excellence but also improve the overall quality of life. The Award rewards architects, but also identifies municipalities, builders, clients, master artisans and engineers who have played important roles in the realization of a project.

“By design, the Tadjourah SOS Children Village is meant to shelter at-risk children;” said Farrokh Derakhshani, Director of the Award. “It gives children the chance of a normal childhood in a loving family.”

The project team of the SOS Children’s Village in Tadjourah built 15 houses in a medina-styled complex. Each unit, built in cement blocks and RC structure, houses six to seven children and a foster mother. The design emulates the traditional layout of narrow streets. Wind towers and lattices provide natural shade and ventilation. Because the local Afar people were traditionally nomadic herders, the sand colour chosen for the walls and the openings between the different spaces echo this lifestyle (only the bedrooms have doors). Vegetation is also an important part of the design: the only existing tree on the site has been preserved and the inhabitants are encouraged to garden.

The sites will now undergo a rigorous investigation by experts who visit and evaluate each project on-site. Their reports are the basis for the Master Jury’s selection of the eventual laureates. It should be noted that projects commissioned by the Aga Khan or any of the institutions of the Aga Khan Development Network (AKDN) are ineligible for the Award. To be eligible for consideration in the 2019 Award cycle, projects had to be completed between 1 January 2012 and 31 December 2017, and should have been in use for at least one year.

The Aga Khan Award for Architecture was established by the Aga Khan in 1977 to identify and encourage building concepts that successfully address the needs and aspirations of communities in which Muslims have a significant presence. The Award recognises examples of architectural excellence in the fields of contemporary design, social housing, community improvement and development, historic preservation, reuse and area conservation, as well as landscape design and improvement of the environment. Since the Award was launched 42 years ago, 116 projects have received the award and more than 9,000 building projects have been documented.

Aga Khan Award for Architecture

Press contact:

Sam Pickens

Telephone: (41.22) 909.72.00

E-mail: info@akdn.org

Website: www.akdn.org/architecture

Notes

The Aga Khan Award for Architecture is part of the Aga Khan Development Network (AKDN). It currently operates 1,000 or so programmes and institutions in 30 countries.. It employs approximately 80,000 people, the majority of whom are based in developing countries. The AKDN's annual budget for non-profit development activities is approximately US$ 950 million. Its economic development arm, the Aga Khan Fund for Economic Development (AKFED), generates annual revenues of US$ 4.3 billion, but all surpluses generated by its project companies are reinvested in further development activities, usually in fragile, remote or post-conflict regions.